$110/full-time educator

AIGA is committed to supporting designers across the arc of their careers through information, inspiration, recognition and advocacy—and supporting the educators who often play the most significant role in bringing these careers into focus. By joining, you help introduce the values of AIGA to students and strengthen the extensive network of design educators across the country.

AIGA offers a special annual membership rate of $110 for full-time faculty. Simply include a letter from your department chair or academic dean, printed on your school's letterhead verifying your full-time status when you submit this application.

AIGA prepares design educators through the Design Educators Community, a thriving group within AIGA established to support the unique activities and responsibilities of design educators at the undergraduate and post-graduate levels. The Design Educators Community works to facilitate communication among design educators, establish standards for design education and communicate the value of design education to the larger profession, among other goals. The Design Educators Community's centerpiece is an ongoing series of conferences held around the country that explore educational issues ranging from design history, theory and pedagogy to globalization, environmental concerns and new media.

AIGA membership offers tangible benefits like discounts on Apple and Adobe products, Shutterstock standard image subscriptions, creating your own books through Blurb, lynda.com subscriptions, FedEx® services, subscriptions to F+W Media magazines like HOW, Print and CMYK and Rockport Publishers books; steeply discounted rates for national conferences and exclusive access to AIGA/Aquent Survey of Design Salaries and the AIGA National Design Center library in New York.

Due to the special requirement needed to receive this rate, it's not available through the online application. This rate is not available to part-time or adjunct faculty members.
